Dear Dr. Louarn and coauthors,

I'm sorry to report that we must interrupt the review process and reject your submission in its present form. The reviewers do not particularly object to what is in the paper. Both have recommended rejection, but with at least an implicit acknowledgement that you may have the basis for a good publishable paper if you can extract a more significant, new result that is well supported by the observations. Should you decide that it is feasible to significantly strengthen the analysis and results then I assure you that a reworked manuscript would receive full consideration, if you chose to submit to Ocean Science.

As Editor, yours sincerely, –Matthew Hecht
